Above: Cornwall Elementary School fifth-graders listen to professional storyteller Christine Petrell Kallevig on Monday. Kallevig calls her presentation 'storigami,' a combination of storytelling and origami. While telling a story, she folds giant-sized paper to illustrate a character or action. By the time the story is over, an origami figure is created.

Left: Third-grader Josh Ragsdale works on scherenschnitte at one of the stations. Scherenschnitte, the art of paper cutting, was brought to Colonial America by German immigrants. Pennsylvania Germans used scherenschnitte in marriage and birth certificates.
